Power Consumption in Piano Playing.

The amount of power expended in playing on a piano has recently been figured out in a way which, if not altogether accurate, is at least interesting. Commenting on the statement made that "it requires more force to sound a note gently on this instrument than it does to lift the lid of a kettle," The American Art Journal says that this is "easy to verify if one takes a small handful of coins and piles them on a key of the piano. When a sufficient quantity is piled on to make a note sound, they may be weighed and the figures will be found to be true. If the pianist is playing fortissimo, a much greater force is needed. At times a force of six pounds is thrown upon a single key to produce a solitary effect. With chords the force is generally spread over the various notes sounded simultaneously, though a greater output of force is undoubtedly expended. This is what gives pianists the wonderful strength in their fingers that is often commented on. A story used to be told of Paderewski that he could crack a pane of French plate glass with a single blow merely by placing one hand upon it as if upon a keyboard and striking it sharply with his middle finger. Chopin's last study in Op. 10 has a passage which takes two minutes and five seconds to play. The total pressure brought to bear on this, it is estimated, is equal to three full tons. The average 'tonnage' of an hour's piano playing of Chopin's music varies from 12 to 84 tons.

"Wagner has not yet been calculated along these lines,"—Cassier's Magazine.

The Magicians of India.

The magicians of India are a clever lot. For a rupee (30 cents) they will furnish quite an entertainment. One beats a drum and acts as interactor, while there is generally a small boy or girl as assistant. A clever trick is performed by placing the small boy or girl in a basket, covering the opening. After running a sword in the basket from the top and all sides, until one imagines the youngster done to death, the basket is opened and he is still there intact. No preparations are made beforehand, and these cunning tricks are done on the ground but five or ten feet away. In the same way a small head is made to grow under merely a cloth covering. Considering that the magician has no accessories, it is really wonderful.

The last part of the magician's program was no trick by any means. A coconut was handed to me for inspection. It seemed sound and solid. After a great deal of drumming and heeling to produce an excitement the coconut was thrown into the air 20 feet. With a loud yell the magician sprang under it, when it descended and the coconut burst to pieces on his head. The blow staggered him at first, but a few supporting pats on the back by his comrades and a drink of whiskey soon straightened him out. Naught girls, accompanied by one or two musicians, are frequently seen dancing in the street, but their performance is very slow and uninteresting.—Outing.

The Real Mistress of Balmoral.

The ruler of Balmoral castle is not the queen, but the housekeeper, a Mrs. Mussen, a typical personage of her class, governed always in rustling black silk, lace trimmed apron and white cap. She and the queen are said to be excellent friends, and many a gossip have they had together when affairs of state have been laid aside.

Mrs. Mussen also stands high in the favor of the little Battenbergs, who are sure to seek her out as soon as they have landed at the castle, for she fairly idolizes the little ones and keeps many a treasure in her apartments with which to regale them.

To the world at large Mrs. Mussen is a holy terror. Her word is law, and she enforces it at the point of the bayonet or the broomstick. It is said that once the queen wanted a certain maid, to whom she had taken a fancy, detailed to the care of her own room, but the housekeeper remonstrated, telling her majesty it was quite out of order and she really must not spot the servants by undue notice. The queen was wise enough not to insist, and "dear Mrs. Mussen" won the day.—Strand Magazine.

Under Water.

A very novel method of getting rid of seals in a boiler is credited by a Boston paper to an engineer in that city. The seals came from the use of well water. The feed pipe enters the front of the boiler just about the water line, and has slots cut in it about an eighth of an inch wide, instead of the ordinary spraying method of distributing the water, and surrounding the feed pipes is a larger pipe, about 6 inches in diameter and cut away at the top; the feed water enters the boiler and discharges through the slots in the feed pipe, depositing all the foreign matter in the water into this catch pipe instead of into the boiler—the success of the plan depending upon having a high temperature of feed at about the boiling point, when the solids held in suspension or solution in water will be deposited.

A BOND SCANDAL.

There were two syndicates bidding for the $100,000,000 bonds which the Government decided to issue to supply gold to maintain the single standard. One of these syndicates was engineered by J. Pierpont Morgan, the agent in the United States for European gold brokers, and the other was managed by John A. Stewart of the United States Trust Company of New York. The Morgan syndicate bid for the whole issue and the Stewart syndicate bid for $75,000,000. Morgan alone knew the price at which he wanted the bonds, while there were about 175 persons in the Stewart syndicate who knew the price which Stewart offered. The Stewart bid was handed in first to the Treasury Department and the Morgan bid later and only fifteen minutes before the bids closed. The Stewart bid was 110.075, and the Morgan bid 110.687. The Morgan bid shows that the price originally put down was 110. These figures were written in gray ink and subsequently "687" were inserted in black ink. It was supposed that the Treasury officials opened the Stewart bid and told Morgan what the figures were. Senator Hill introduced a resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to send to the Senate a detailed statement of the bids. Subsequent developments, however, seem to confirm the belief that some member of the Stewart syndicate told Morgan or his friends what their bid was, as the Treasury officials say it was impossible for him to get the information from the department as both bids were in a room, tightly sealed, some time before they were opened.

It seems that those gold syndicates rely on sharp tactics to gain a point and while all work in unison against silver, they take advantage of each other in getting bonds. Stewart, while he does not get the bonds, consoles himself with the knowledge that his bid caused Morgan to pay several millions more to the Government than he intended.

The opinion prevails that much of the gold required for the purchase of the bonds will be drawn from the Treasury, and that when the bonds are issued and paid for there will not be much, if any, over $100,000,000 in the reserve fund. Under our present financial system and the determination to maintain the single gold standard the Treasury is at the mercy of the gold syndicate and it can keep plunging the Nation deeper and deeper in debt by drawing gold out of the Treasury with one hand and paying it into the Treasury with the other for interest-bearing bonds on which it makes a profit of from five to ten per cent the minute the bonds are issued. But this is gold bugism, sustained by a Democratic Administration and a Republican Congress, and those who protest against it are denounced as anarchists and communists.

THE CARSON MINT.

The sub-Committee of the House Committee on Appropriations has now under consideration the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills. It is giving attention to the appropriations for the maintenance and operation of the various mints, and a disposition is being shown to reduce expenses in this department of the Government. In this connection a recommendation has been made that the Carson mint be abolished and turned into an assay office. As the Carson mint is now conducted it is nothing more than an assay office. It is fully equipped for coinage, yet though orders have been issued for the other mints to coin silver dollars the machinery in the Carson mint rusts in idleness.

While the National Government has not been kindly disposed toward the Carson mint it has been kept going at intervals, mainly through the influence of the Nevada delegation in Congress, for years. Sherman, when Secretary of the Treasury, suspended coinage at the Carson mint for a while. Under Cleveland's two administrations the dies at the Carson mint have been hung up and it merely assays bullion.

Unfortunately very little can be said against the proposition to discontinue the Carson mint. Facts show that it was conducted dishonestly for years. Those in charge in the good old days when "damn a rebel" covered a multitude of sins not only plundered the Government but depositors as well, and it was high treason to even intimate that they were guilty of any offense. Henry, who occupied a subordinate position in the institution, is now wearing stripes for stealing bullion, but it is extremely doubtful if others occupying higher positions than he and whose share of the plunder was presumably greater than his, will be sent to keep him company. While it is likely that the mint in future, if coinage should be resumed, would be conducted honestly, if the old gang was not again permitted to manage it, it seems probable that it will be dismantled on the score of economy.

Mining Industry says: Greenbacks, treasury notes and silver coins are plenty good enough for use in developing the resources of the country in which lies our wealth. It is madness to destroy and discredit these and borrow gold from England, which we can only repay by shipping her our products at ruinous prices.

It is rumored that a fitting and ample apology from Lord Dunraven to the New York Yacht Club is on the way to the United States.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Slim Attendance of Members—Debating The Silver Bill.

WASHINGTON, February 8.—There were exactly sixteen members on the floor and nineteen spectators in the galleries when the House opened this morning. The legislative body of yesterday still continued, as the House had been in recess over night. Corlies and Boatner spoke in favor of non-concurrence and Milner and Bartlett in favor of concurrence in the Senate silver substitute for the bond bill. While Bartlett was speaking, Boatner by reference to the defeat of "Silver Dollar" Bland, General Hatch and other silver leaders, drew forth an indignant protest against the treacherous manner in which the gold Democrats had stabbed in the back the Democratic candidates who differed from them. "Witness," said he contemptuously, "the scene daily being enacted in Kentucky. When did it become the Democratic doctrine to defeat Democratic candidates?"

"The situation in Kentucky," replied Boatner, "only illustrates the destroying effect of the Democrats refusing to stand by the party platform. If the silver Democrats would abide by the declaration the party made in the convention we would not to-day be threatened with loss by the Senator from that State."

"We are threatened with loss by the Senator in Kentucky," retorted Bartlett, "because men who are not in the majority seek to control. I want to say that whether in the majority or the minority, where ever the Democratic flag floats, there will be my stand."

"If the Democratic National Convention adopts a gold standard and nominates a gold candidate, interposed Skinner, "will you support the ticket?"

"I will vote for any man whom the majority of the Democrats nominate in convention," replied Bartlett.

"Then you are willing to sacrifice the interest of the people on the altar of the party?"

"I am willing to forego temporarily the consummation which must eventually come and can only come through the Democratic party."

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

The President has gone on another duck-hunting expedition on the light-house tender Mayle.

The Central Agricultural Association of Belgium has petitioned Parliament in favor of bimetalism.

The mystery of the murder of Pearl Bryan, the girl who was beheaded near Cincinnati, is yet unsolved. It is thought that cocaine was used by her murderers.

Mrs. Hammond, the wife of John Hays Hammond, telegraphs from Pretoria that because of ill health the Governor allows her to move her husband to a private house.

Gold is at a premium of one-fourth to one-half per cent in New York. Bullion dealers look for an active demand next week when the allotment of government bonds is made.

There were sixteen members on the floor when the House of Representatives opened yesterday. Speaker Reed takes less pains to keep a quorum than when there were fewer Republicans in the House.

The New York State Republican Committee met yesterday, endorsed the candidacy of Governor Morton for the Presidency and named March 24th and New York City the place for holding the State Convention.

Rev. Father J. M. Fitzgerald, convicted at Rochester, New York, of arson in the second degree, has been sentenced to ten years in the State Prison at Auburn. He denied that he committed or instigated the crime.

J. R. Dunlop, proprietor of the Chicago Dispatch, has been guilty found in the United States Court of sending indecent matter in his paper through the mails and sentenced to two years imprisonment and a fine of $2,000.

The House Committee on Pacific Railroads is hearing evidence relative to the proposed funding of the debt. E. Ellery Anderson, Government Director of the Union Pacific, would advocate no particular plan of reorganization. He favored one which should embrace the Union and the Central Pacific. He was confident they were not able to meet both principal and interest due the Government. He estimated the property to be worth from $75,000,000 to $80,000,000. In 1894 the net earnings were about $4,000,000, the lowest in years. He would recommend the Government to accept a cash offer of $35,000,000 and it would be better to do this than enter into the other schemes suggested. This suggestion was based on the Union Pacific alone.

He expressed the opinion that the Oregon Short Line would be foreclosed within six months and taken out of the system.

A Private Question Answered Publicly.

Every day I am asked the following question: "Mrs. Hunter, tell us honestly, do you think Viavi as good as represented?" Yes, my friends, better! I have handled it over three years and each year my faith has grown stronger. If you want good health use it faithfully and you will not be disappointed. Mrs. B. E. HUNTER.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

BREVITIES.

Passenger traffic was very light on all trains last night.

The Democratic State Central Committee of Texas disagreed on the silver question and for a time it looked as if two conventions would be held to elect delegates to the National Convention. A compromise was finally effected by an agreement that the voters at the primary election should decide by their ballots whether the delegates should insist on a free coinage plank in the national platform.

The Palace Dry Goods and Carpet House offers for one week at special sale 4-4 bleached muslin, good quality, at 14 yards for $1.00 and the best brand of bleached pequot sheeting at greatly reduced prices. The Palace also offers 10-4 white, gray and tan heavy blankets at 85 cents a pair, the price of which is generally $1.50 a pair. The Palace is about to take stock and rather than carry them over offer them at such matchless prices. Besides that, the room is needed for the new goods soon to arrive.

Mayor Steele of Helena, Montana, who went to Newport News with his daughter to christen the gunboat Helena, was interviewed at Chicago on his return. He said he had been a staunch Democrat, but if the National Convention does not put a straight free coinage plank in the platform with a candidate known to be an honest friend of silver the Democrats of the west will go to the free silver party. Montana Republicans have no idea that the St. Louis Convention will declare for free coinage and they will not go with the party.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

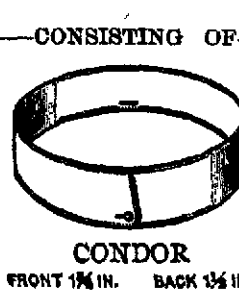

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

A BATTLE OF HORSES.

A FIERCE FIGHT BETWEEN ARMY STEEDS AND WILD ANIMALS.

Equine Passions That Became Fiendish When Fully Aroused—Riderless Cavalry Steeds That Showed the Results of Their Military Training.

Just at sundown, and while we were at supper, a drove of wild horses numbering 88 suddenly emerged from Thatcher's pass and deployed on the level ground of the valley. They had made use of the pass to cross from Climax valley, where grass and water might have failed them or horse hunters had appeared to give them a fright. They emerged from the pass in single file, led by a spotted stallion whose mane reached almost to his knees and whose tail touched the ground when he was at rest. He was the handsomest of the drive leaders to be met with in the days of the wild horse, but he was yet a king among horses. Of the remainder of the herd about 30 were fine animals. The others would hardly be worth the catching. Three or four were recognized as cavalry horses abandoned on the march, and twice that number had collar marks to prove that they had stampeded from some immigrant train.

When clear of the pass, they formed in line and advanced upon us to within a quarter of a mile. We had 75 horses at the lariat pins, and for half an hour we had all we could do to prevent a stampede. The wild horses were finally driven down the valley by two mounted men, but they did not seem to have much fear of us. On the contrary, the leader of the drive exhibited such temper that the men feared they would have to shoot him. It was an hour before our cavalry horses calmed down in the slightest. Every animal seemed enraged at the sight of the free herd, and the captain's Kentucky stallion acted as if possessed by a fiend. He had been doubly fuscated at the beginning of the excitement, and later on, this proved a fortunate thing. He made the most tremendous efforts to get free, and when at length he realized the futility of further efforts in that direction he uttered shrill screams of rage and lashed out with his heels till no one dared approach him. All night long he stood on his feet pawing and snorting, and the camp sentinals reported the wild horses as hanging about within half a mile of us.

Daylight had come, and the sentinals of the night were coming into camp, when the wild horses rushed into view, a mile below us. On the instant we discovered them, and while four-fifths of the men were yet under their blankets the captain's horse uttered a scream which must have been taken as a signal. He reared up, shook his head like an angry lion and freed himself of his halter. In the same instant every other horse in the command secured his liberty. Some galloped up the pins, some worked their heads clear of the straps, and away went the whole drove down the valley. It was not a stampede, as we naturally feared. Even had our animals desired to join the ranks of the free they would have been rebuffed. Our horses were tamed, and in a solid bunch they drove right through the lines of the wild horses and left four of them lying crippled on the grass as they passed. The prairie drove retreated up the valley half a mile and then wheeled about in a single line. When our drove halted and turned, there was a distance of three-quarters of a mile between the combatants. We were ordered to fall in, with a view of advancing upon the wild horses and driving them off, but before we had gotten into line it was too late.

The sight was a wonderful one. The two leaders advanced as if they meant to decide the issue by a fight between them, but when within 40 yards of each other they wheeled and returned to their respective lines. Then we witnessed something which only a cavalryman will credit. Our horses fell into a double line and dressed to the right as perfectly as if a trooper had occupied each saddle, and while we looked the lines suddenly moved forward on a charge. When they swept past us, the alignment was absolutely perfect, with the captain's horse on the right and leading by about 20 feet. The line of wild horses bent and wavered, but did not break until struck. It was like striking a drumhead with a sledge hammer. I believe that fully 40 horses went down under the shock, but all except four were speedily on their feet again. From this on it was a melee, the whole drove circling around, and each horse biting and kicking and displaying such ferocity as to astonish us. The mob fought past us down the valley and back, and right in front of the camp the climax came. The battle had been raging half an hour, when the spotted stallion hobbled out of it on three legs and bleeding from half a dozen wounds, and that seemed to take the pluck out of his followers. Some ran up the valley and some down, but of the 88 only 57 got away. When the hottest of it was over, we dashed in and secured a horse here and there, and in this manner we finally got hold of the last one, which was the captain's.

Of the 75 only 5 had escaped scot free. Every one of the others had been bitten and kicked, and 12 of them were so crippled as to be worthless. In almost every instance our horses had kicked off both hind shoes, and in some cases the front ones were gone as well. There were 7 dead and 30 crippled horses on that battlefield when hostilities ceased, and of the 57 wild horses which made their escape many were limping badly. Before breaking camp we turned to and put an end to the sufferings of the cripples, and we were not yet in the saddle when a hundred buzzards and a dozen wolves were feasting on the bodies.—Detroit Free Press.

The Meien Didn't Count.

The memoirs of General Marbot upon the first French empire relate that, on the occasion of a very formal distribution of rewards made by Napoleon before Ratisbon, an old grenadier came forward and demanded somewhat sharply, to the astonishment of all, a cross of the Legion of Honor.

"But what have you done?" said Napoleon.

"Why, sire," said the soldier, "it was I who, in the desert of Yufa, when it was terribly hot and you were parched with thirst, brought you a watermelon."

"Thank you," said Napoleon, "but a watermelon for a general is not worth a cross of the Legion of Honor."

The grenadier flew into a violent rage. "Well, then," he shouted, "I suppose that the seven wounds that I got at Asculat and at Lodi and at Asusteritz and at Friedland go for nothing, eh? My 11 campaigns in Italy, in Egypt, in Austria, in Prussia, and in Poland you don't count, I suppose?"

"Tut, tut, tut!" exclaimed the emperor. "How do you get excited when you come to the essential point of the whole matter? I make you now a chevalier of the Legion of Honor for your wounds and your campaigns, but don't tell me any more about your watermelon!"

John's Demise.

Mr. L., a good natured German, was the prosperous proprietor of a considerable clothing business in a country town. He had in his employ one John S., whom he had advanced from cashboy to head clerk and who had for many years been an attaché of the store. Since his promotion John had several times asked for a raise in his salary, and each time his request had been granted. One morning John again appeared at the old merchant's desk with another request for an increase of $10 per month.

"Vy, Shon," said Mr. L., "I think I pays you any more?" "Well," replied John confidently, "I am your principal help here. I have worked you up to a large trade. I know every detail of the business, and indeed I think you could not get along without me." "Is dot so?" exclaimed the German. "Mein Gott, Shon, vot vood I go suppose you vas to die?" "Well," hesitated John, "I suppose you would have to get along without me then." The old man took several whiffs from his big pipe and said nothing. At last he gravely remarked, "Vell, Shon, I guess you better consider yourself dead."—Business Journal.

Perfumes.

In the collecting of perfumes two processes are employed. In one, the grease process, boxes with glass bottoms are prepared, the bottom being covered with pure grease or sand, and the flowers, gathered fresh every day during the season, are laid on trays in the box, the grease being left to absorb the fragrance. In the other process the flowers are placed in a basket hanging over a vat of water, the vapors being caught in a glass jar.
